Join over 32,000 schools and 4.2 million students who have chosen to leave verbs, vocabulary and grammar to us! Using without an account Get Started Follow us on Twitter Connect on Facebook Conjuguemos was launched in 2000 by me, Alejandro Yegros, a Spanish teacher at Weston HS, (Weston, MA). I wasn't a fan of teaching conjugation verbs and figured out that a computer program could do this job better than me and a few worksheets. So I started CONJUGUEMOS as a hobby and kept it up for many years. I still work in the same school and have helped teachers add a lot of content to this site over the years. Used by... (many, many schools) This site has about 3.5 million registered users and is used by hundreds of thousands of students daily to learn verbs. It's a community site: almost all activities were created by teachers across the country and around the world who wanted to add to the site. Teachers approach me through the site, I make computer code, and they provide a list of words. I would say that cooperation was the culmination of years of work on this project. Photos and why frogs on this site?!?! That's the first picture right? This is me... in a sense. I'm much older now. Getting older is not fun. I don't like photos, but I liked the photo that this class took of us. The second picture is of my classmate at Weston High School wearing a cool CONJUGUEMOS T-shirt. Her name is Gina Barbosa, she teaches Latin. She is obviously amazing, and demanded to earn $20 to model a shirt. The frog in place is not a frog. It's coqui, a kind of little frog that is basically a Puerto Rican national animal. See the picture on the right. I'm Puerto Riora, so I think my side should represent my people a little bit. If you are a long-timer user, drop me a note. This site has changed and grown tremendously over the years, and I would be curious to see what those who have come through it think.
